

EXHIBIT 37

Defendant's shaming of another exotic animal owner. It is believed that the third lemur mentioned was immediately bounced out of the defendant's facility and sold. If this indeed happened, it is considered "flipping" and is a highly unethical practice. It is also understood that within two years the defendant sold these two "rescues" because they failed to produce offspring.

